Wait it actually got released?. \u2b50\u2b50\u2b50\u2b50. This reminds me of the Shadez series that is free, but for me all the maps have a large black line across like it looks like it's flat but all the units go under the thing and u can't see them. NEED HELP. the game is so good very well made

i was paid for the key of the game to say this comment. Best. Game. Ever.

Super fun! Lots of High speed frantic combos.. Been playing it for a while, I would say a couple of levels and so far is a great experience, movement is smooth and terrific graphics detail. Love that you can grab almost everything you see and it is a very involving experience. Recommended game. I've been playing it on Samsung Odyssey and while WMR is not in the list of supported devices, haven't run into any issues and the controllers are correctly mapped to match the Vive controller..

DISCLAIMER: If you don't like resource management, you probably won't enjoy this game!

Great little game, don't be put off by the price! It reflects the care and dedication that has been put into it by the creator. The premise on the surface appears simple. You are the artificial intelligence of a colony ship, charged with getting your human cargo to Mars. You control power to the ship's systems, but you cannot repair them when they break down. For this you need your humans, just like they need you for breathable air and a working kitchen. Whilst you can set alarms of varying degrees of urgency to alert them to broken or compromised systems, they won't always respond to them as they should do. On top of this your ship is old, the parts are mostly cobbled together from whatever your humans could afford. So everything breaks down. EVERYTHING! From the oxygen scrubbers that keep the crew from suffocating to the toilet to the controls of the ship itself. Repairing them takes time and effort, adding to the above problems that affect your valiant colonists. But repair them you must. No oxygen scrubber? No air. Everyone dies. No controls? You go wildly off course and actually begin to head AWAY from Mars rather than towards it. Then you run out of air or power. Everyone dies. No toilet? I shouldn't even have to explain that one. Somehow, everyone dies. Poop and space don't mix you know. Here is where the resources come in.

Your current resources are displayed in a box at the top of the game screen, which also displays your progress towards Mars out of 100%. The oxygen the humans breathe, the power you use to run the ship, the food, the spare parts for fixing things. Fuel for the engine and raw materials that can be used by various on board systems to create more of the other resources. Finally, there's waste, expelled by the crew after each meal. All of these resources tie in together in a well thought out loop. A lack of any one will almost always lead to total failure, an inability to eat leading to the crew passing out and being unable to repair broken systems, to give just one example. Luckily you can outfit your ship with various devices to produce or recycle these resources, getting you that little bit further towards the red planet.

The ship itself is designed from scratch by you, in a surprisingly versatile ship builder in which you can set everything from the number of compartments the ship has to how many resources it starts out with. Failure encourages a whole new ship design, tweaking resources and setting modifiers on ship systems to improve them. It feels like you get a bit closer to success each time. The crew are also fully customizable, interacting with you as they scoot around the ship, responding to your alarms and warnings. The way they speak feels like a kind of futuristic slang, an attempt to translate the efficiency of computing into human interaction. Hints are dropped at a decaying Earth you've left behind, one you really don't want to return to. A nice touch that I found adds to the overall atmosphere. (no pun intended) The graphics are minimalistic but work well in the games setting. The sound is great, a whole host of boops and beeps and ambience. The red alert warning you can place on broken critical systems is particularly alarming. (again no pun intended) The game is tough, but success is possible. Every attempt gives you advancement points that you can use to unlock new ship systems and crewmember abilities. I had to unlock everything before I made it to Mars on my 23rd attempt, with one unit of energy, nearly everything on board broken, and no spare parts to fix it. For the first time in a while, I felt genuinely satisfied upon having completed a video game. An even nicer surprise was the words "Ending 1V6" after the win text box. I've since managed to beat the game again with another ending. Each game is so short you can play it for ages, then stop, then play again and have a new experience each time.

The only thing I would criticise is the at times clunky user interface, which can sometimes result in accidental turning off of important things or placing needless alarms on working systems that take up valuable crew time that could be spent fixing that solar sail that broke like 25 days ago. Part of that last one is the crews fault I guess. This extends into the minigame that others have mentioned, essentially minesweeper but with yellow dots to warn you where the mines are. Its a smart addition that avoids the RNG element but can get frustrating at first as the tutorial is a bit ambiguous. Overall though, what seems to be a relatively simple game turns out to possess a considerable amount of depth and replayability. I would definitely recommend this game to anyone who likes resource management or sci-fi in general, and for the original idea and story.. Awesome game! As i wrote in previous game's review, it's just WWII Hitman. In this game everything is set very classic style. And it's just perfect. Very good AI, gameplay, Beautiful & accurate atmosphere which has ambience of WWII and similar old times. (villages, castle, open ground, vehicles, trains, inner ambience & architecture etc.) This game must get good place in stealth/stealth assassination games. Very nice work!. Looking forward for sequel of this! :)

I'm always picky with VR Puzzle games and this one did it right! It got me sitting on the floor playing with blocks to solve simple yet complicated puzzles. You get to a point where you need to align everything fast and line em up and connect em as fast as you can! I've only played a little bit and plan to play a lot more the next time I get in my Vive!. its k.

- 14 year WoW-Veteran btw. This game best hide seek ever yes. This game has so much to offer and it very long play through it has elements of,rpgs of the past when this gene started it has challeges and leveling up and loot is awesome i highly recomend this game for all who love the RPGS of the past,.. This is a great fun little game, cheap too!

I've played it with versus few of my friends and we've had a few laughs whilst playing it.

I mean it's obviously still in early access so there's room for improvement but the updates so far made some nice tweaks and changes.

Not bad at all for the price of a chocolate bar these days!. This is a great game and I had a lot of fun playing it however be warned this game is very difficult so if your looking for something you can do in a few hours this isn't it. Overall, it's a great experience and I recommend it.. This is one of the best games on Steam. Finally it is available here :D. Its an old game, but highly recomend for co-op players.. Pretty good free game with interesting storyline.. PUzzle GAem? but... puzl maek SENSE????? 10000/10 GOTY
